

"We feel this solution to our security needs has benefitted the company"

Comfort Insurance, who specialise in insurance for caravans, undertook a major redevelopment of a derelict supermarket site in Dagenham. The first floor of this building houses their new offices. The building and interior have been designed with care and attention to detail.

The building is split into 3 units. One unit is Comfort's offices, the other two units are tenanted. There is also a training room that is used by Comfort, but is also hired out to other organisations.

Peter Cues of Comfort Insurance decided to investigate using access control. The primary requirement was restricting access to the main offices to Comfort's staff, control access on the training room to authorised persons, and to be able to produce reports on movement through the doors. Peter comments "The security of our offices was my prime objective".

Intech Fire and Security were approached by Peter for recommendations. Peter had already looked at various other systems but was not totally happy with them. Richard Hewitt of Intech asked Paxton's technical sales representative to demonstrate Net2 to Peter. As a result of the demonstration Intech Fire and Security were asked to specify and install Net2 on the site. Peter says, "It just looked an ideal piece of kit. The other systems I had looked at performed similar functions but looked more complicated and were also more expensive."

Installation is now complete and Ben Cues the project manager of the refurbishment programme is very pleased. Ben explains "We use a lot of functions on the software. We have read in/read out on our main office entrance and use reports for time and attendance purposes. We have different time zones and access levels set up for different departments. We also use these facilities in the software for the part of the offices which are rented out and the training room. I found the software very easy to learn and our administrator is confident in using it.

We really feel that having this solution to our security needs has benefitted the company. The system is very versatile. Some of the benefits are intangible such as just feeling very secure in the building."

Comfort Insurance are very pleased with the system. Ben says, "I would have no hesitation in recommending Net2 to other businesses."
